- By July 1951 fourteen prominent persons in Sinkiang had been killed by the Chinese Communists, including the following: Badarashi, chief secretary of the Mongolian Cultural Promotion Association in Urumchi in 1946; Pawa, who was a member of the Sinkiang-Mongolian Literary Research Association; Cha-pu-pa-na; Ku-li (周利); Chimed, a representative to the National Assembly from the Center Torogot League in 1948; and SHIH Yun-chien (石雲乾). CH'IA Chia-fu (何嘉南), Mongolian female representative to the 1947 National Assembly, and WU Ching-pin (吳靜彬), member of the Legislative Yuan in 1948, have been detained in an internment camp in Urumchi. Fu-lu-fu (南魯南), who has not been on good terms with the Chinese Communists or Soviets for many years, led 1,000 guerrillas in Sinkiang, but he has been killed. Samchin, god-daughter of Burhan, Sinkiang Provincial Chairman, and concubine of Prince Manchugjab, who was a reserve member of the Kuomintang Central Executive Committee in 1945, has become a member of the Northwest Minority Committee. She was formerly a delegate to the National Assembly.
- The mission of CHANG Ching-wu (張經武), head of the Lhasa Military Control Commission, is as follows: to direct all Chinese Communist troops in Tibet; to rule the country politically; to train the people of Tibet and develop key points in Nepal and India; to make Tibet a bridge for Communist penetration of Nepal; to send geologists to the interior of the country to seek uranium.
